Attendance of museums and galleries.

According to statistics, attendance of museums and galleries tends to increase.

Data on English museums and galleries for 2013, 2015 and 2017 has been collected. It came out that although the attendance in Natural History Museum and Science Museum went lower in 2015 because of ~~the~~ admission charges introduced in 2014, generally the quantity of people visiting museums and galleries is growing, and the rate of growth draws on 15%.

~~According to statistics,~~ The increase in attendance in 2015 is way bigger than in 2017 and reaches 50% in Tate Gallery. The cause appears to be ~~the~~ in a pay rise or ~~a~~ a successful museum popularisation campaign or ~~is~~ a great wave of tourists in the period.

The most successful of all was the British Museum which grew its audience from 2,6 ^{million} to 5,6 million, and then goes Tate Gallery, which became a well-known gallery with 2,2 mln visitors from not even a million.

Heading to recommendations to boards of directors, it is necessary to remind first: although admission charges will help make the museum better, it should be introduced slowly, respectively to plans and experiences, if not, the comparison between the numbers of visitors in ~~Natural History~~ and Science Museum during the ~~one~~ years ~~may~~ ^{is} a great example of what may happen. Also, although exhibitions are substantial and the museum's name is unchanging; the exhibits must always be smart, but not in accordance with the mainstream.

Help the population learn and become the pride of the world and the museum will attract more eager people from everywhere.
