since I'm doing a project on the attendance of museums and galleries, I collected the information about it. I would like to analyse some data on English museums and galleries for three years.

It can be clearly seen that the number of visitors in British Museum, National Gallery and Tate Gallery increased dramatically, while rates of visiting Natural History Museum and Science Museum fluctuated.

It is important to note that Science Museum was the most popular in 2013. In 2015 British Museum reached the peak of attendance with 6.1 mln visitors. As far as I can judge, Natural History Museum and Science Museum became less popular than other ones, as they introduced admission charges in 2014.

I have some recommendations that can help to draw on people's attention to importance of visiting museums and galleries. Firstly, new technological developments can be appealed to exhibitions in museums and galleries to make them brighter and more entertaining. Secondly, the tickets can be sold for lower prices in order to make art available for everyone. Thirdly, there should be more events that can make people more interested in art, science, history and so on.

I hope I've managed to describe and compare the main features and my report will help to increase people's attendance of museums and galleries in future.
